

Muslim Religious Oppression

This year, the United States has seen over 500 documented complaints of anti-Muslim hate and bias. Overall people have become less tolerant of each other and the difference they may have with others based on their opinion, mindset, or belief. We advocate government and countries to facilitate platforms for all devotees of religion of Islam to be able to have necessary accommodations.

Muslims have the responsibility to be law-abiding citizens wherever they live, and if the law does not accommodate their religious needs, to approach the authorities and explain what changes they require. Islamic faith is respectful of other faith and religious mindsets and vice versa religious needs of Muslims should be respected.

In recent years we have witnessed an increase of prayer areas in common areas like some busy airports and that is a great start. Hospitals and many universities also have designated prayer areas. (inclusive of all faith followers)

We advocate for rights of Muslims in areas where the local law puts limitations on religious practices of Muslims and open a dialogue with appropriate authorities in hopes of resolving the issue. Example of some of areas we focus on: Hijab limitations in Laws of France and some other European countries.
